

I'm appreciative of all the wonderful, talented, supportive people I get to work with at QLN. Our SuperCamp Programs Manager Steve Arrowood was ready and willing to read through the text and comment on ideas to keep them true to who we are. Our facilitators and staff shared many stories that supported this book. We ride on the shoulders of all the people along SuperCamp's path . . . oh my goodness, so many . . . who have believed and given of themselves and their talent to further our vision.

Someone who greatly influenced my life's direction and vision is Marshall Thurber, my former partner at the Burklyn Business School. His vision, ideas, and teachings continue to inspire many. The business school lives on through the leadership of my long-time friend DC Cordova.

I thank my friends DC, Vishara Veda, Jerry Weinerth, Steve Curtis, and Bill Galt who supported me when I most needed it. You know the story.

I thank and acknowledge my SuperCamp cofounders, Eric Jensen and Greg Simmons. It was quite the exhilarating and exhausting ride of faith when we began. Thank you for the partnership that formed and launched our program.

My family has been truly supportive as I share the story that they lived. My children, Grant and Dana, my daughter-in-law Joanna and son-in-law Michael, and my grandchildren bring meaning and joy to the ebb and flow of life. I appreciate my sisters and our gatherings to share stories of our youth. In the memory of my mom, dad, and first husband, Don: I feel very blessed.

How wonderful to share a vision, purpose, and life with my partner and husband, Joe Chapon. You bring my life into dynamic focus and keep me grounded with your loving support.

And my thanks to a generous group of readers who committed to previewing the Quantum Success manuscript and sharing their feedback. Their collective imprint is in this book, and I acknowl-
